The workshop will also detail the changes in the State Board of Health rules that give more emphasis to different types and strengths of soil structure. This affects the applicable soil type for a site, which will affect the loading rate. This classroom workshop will be followed in the Fall of 2006 with three field workshops in areas of Western Washington where many soils have a strong or moderate structure. Attendance in the classroom session will be a recommended prerequisite for attending the field courses.
